Collaboration Agreement between HUA and NUIST

New opportunities for students and faculty of both Universities in the fields of education, research and innovation.

Extending the strategy of developing significant international collaborations, Harokopio University of Athens (HUA) signed a Memorandum of Cooperation with Nanjing University of Information Science and Technology (NUIST) in China.

The agreement marks the beginning of active academic cooperation, focusing on stimulating and supporting educational intercultural activities and projects between the two Universities.

The main achievement to preserve is to pursue collaborative endeavors in several areas, such as promoting institutional exchange to participate in various teaching or research activities and professional development. This goal will be supported through organizing symposia, conferences, short courses, and meetings on research issues and will be expanded with the consolidation of specific collaborations.

Moreover, the agreement promotes exchanging information regarding advancements in teaching, student development, and research at each institution.

As a result of fruitful efforts, the current collaboration establishes a program of exchange and cooperation in areas of interest and creates new opportunities for students and faculty at both institutions.
